Review
"A light-hearted but no-nonsense approach to being an entrepreneur...Filled with ways to creatively survive and succeed as an independent businessperson." -- Today's Librarian, September 2000

"If you have ever had the faintest notion of going it alone, your enthusiasm will be renewed and you will have the knowledge and skills to really make it work." -- Wyvern Publication Business Centre, March 2000

...the list of 70 lessons could easily become a mantra for all self-employed professionals. -- Shannon Belew, Huntsville Times Business Columnist, February 8, 2001

A book of wisdom about self-employment, a heads-up for those considering self-employment and for "captains of industry" in home-based businesses. -- Knight Ridder Newspapers, October 9, 2000 by Claude Crowley

A book that offers a positive, joyful, whinning-free outlook for today's home-based self-employer person... in enjoyable, gracious and guru-like prose. -- Asian Fortune, Washington, D.C., February 2001 by Mercedes Tira Andrei, p. 19.

Equipping the inner entrepreneur: Eye-opening work...Wise and witty. -- Publishers Weekly, May 15, 2000

Recommended reading for any self-employed person thinking about going back "inside," as well as thinking of going "outside." -- Denver Business Journal, August 21, 2000 by Jodi Torpey

Written from direct experience...with a light, folksy touch, it's a useful and supportive read for anyone who works from home. -- Alex Benady, Amazon.co.uk, May 2000

From the Inside Flap
Spare room tycoons, says author James Chan, rule their own domain. They successfully invent independent careers and autonomous lives. "I am a captain of industry myself," Chan writes, "though my craft is more like a rowboat than an ocean liner. My empire is small, but I do rule it. And I would rather be captain of my dinghy than a junior officer on the Titanic."
