Editorial Review

From Library Journal
The Nigerian writer's first book since he was awarded the Nobel Prize in 1986 sounds a further note of political urgency. Essentially direct address and hortatory, giving neither the speaker nor anyone else a chance to hide, these poems are probably better sungSoyinka's repetition and dialogue suggest poetry's origin as news delivered orally. Sense is through sound, making the logic of the line immediate, although sometimes associations are not clear; in "Like Rudolf Hess, the Man said," for instance, we don't know who the "designated" enemy is, as Soyinka creates associations between Mandela-Mengele, the Israelis, South Africans, Icarus, the gold rush, and Auschwitz. Poems of immediacy, translating reflection into anger.

Charles Gray:

As a pupil exactly feel bored to help reading. If their teacher inquired them to go to the library as well as to make summary for some reserve, they are complained. Just small students that has reading's soul or real their passion. They just do what the professor want, like asked to go to the library. They go to at this time there but nothing reading seriously. Any students feel that looking at is not important, boring as well as can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important for you. As we know that on this time, many ways to get whatever we really wish for. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore , this Mandela's Earth and Other Poems can make you really feel more interested to read.
